FAMILY ALBUM

There is an air about St. George's that is inescapable. It is not what you would expect in a school. But that is exactly what is so special about us. Before we are a school, we are a family. We are a gathering of humans with diverse interests and goals. And among us, we share the two necessary commodities that make a family- We respect and care for one another for what we are. Even though we sometimes bicker and tease, we are always learning and growing from our life as a family. And, as in all others, once we enter the St. George's family, in our hearts, we are a part of it forever.

Let each man think himself an act of God, his mind a thought, his life a breath of God; And let each try, by great thoughts and goods deeds,
To show the most of Heaven he hath in him.

Alas, that the longest hill must end in a vale;
but still, who climbs with toil, wheresoe'er, shall find wings waiting there.

Good orators, when they are out, they will spit.

Ptui!

Liz Peery

It doesn't matter where you've been-as long as it was deep.

You know that when the truth is told that you can get what you want or you can just get old.

One man's tacky is another man's Taj-Mahal.

Heather Roy

Arise, go forth, and conquer.

Whoever wakens on a day,
Happy to know and be,
to enjoy the air, to love his kind,
to labor and be free,
already his enraptured soul
lives in Eternity.

If you think you're beaten; you are!
If you think you dare not, you don't.
If you'd like to win, but you can't,
It's almost a cinch you won't.
Life's battles don't always go to the stronger or faster man;
but sooner or later the man who wins is the one who thinks he can,

Bruce Kendall

I believe in fires at midnight
when the dogs have all been fed.
A golden toddy on the mantle;
a broken gun beneath the bed.
Silken mist outside the window
Frogs and newts slip in the dark.
Too much hurry ruins a body:
I'll sit easy; Fan the spark

The Senior Class of 1981 has, above all else, one major responsibility to the St. George's family - to successfully fill our role as the "oldest", setting good examples for our "brothers and sisters" and making this a happier family. We surrounded our attempts, which were sometimes successful and sometimes not, with our enthusiasm and laughter and always with our intense loyalty and pride in the school. But, while we strive to fulfill our responsibilities to the family and slaved over existentialism, and Lorelee's countless economic terms, we never lost sight of our own "family within a family."

We each had our own interests and activities but somehow, everyone always ended up getting involved in everyone else's. We created carpools which inspired Mrs. D's late fines and wake-up calls. We visited "Grant's Vacation House", we ate. Mike and Eric "graphed", we ate, we square danced, we ate, we had memorial services, we ate, some of us spit, and, just so life wouldn't get monotonous, we ate.

Through all our years together, we had fun, learned, and played, but mostly, we created friendships and "family ties" that will hold us together for the rest of our lives.

"So's your Mama!" "All right, do we let Underclassmen in the Lounge today or not?" "You dippy daff." "How did "SGS '81" get painted on C.V.'s barn, Heather and Jean?" "Amber and David AGAIN? Shut Up!!" "First we ate brownies, then a dozen cookies, and after that a cake. Tomorrow we go on a diet right?" "Bummer Dude, Man" "Patti, did you see the Pope this Sunday?" "You guys, what's wrong with the Doobie Van?!" "Clutch, Jen, clutch!" "Free food? I'll be there!"

Our Surrogate Mothers

The St. George's Senior Class of 1981 would like to dedicate their yearbook to two very special teachers and friends - Marsha Weitz and Bettie Jurgensen. Over these last years, while we have gotten to know them, we have developed feelings of great respect and friendship for both of them. In the years before they became our teachers, Mrs. Weitz and Mrs. Jurgensen were like legends to us. We heard over and over from Upper Schoolers about Mrs. Jurgensen's essays and high expectations and about Mrs. Weitz's French novels and page-long lists of vocabulary.

But within our first weeks with both teachers, we discovered that though their expectations were high, their goals for us were not unattainable. What we were to learn in their classes would require some serious thinking, studying and self-discipline. We did a lot of moaning and groaning when we were first assigned "The Magic Mountain" and "Rhinoceros", but by the time we had finished them, we were willing to move on.

Outside of the intense studying and thinking that these women taught us to deal with successfully, they were also fascinating people for us to spend our time with. They buffered the difficult, time consuming work with their always present senses of humor. No discussion was so serious that they couldn't allow Eric's cosmic ramblings or David's French pig-latin. At the same time, through their discussions in class and out in the halls, we were able to come to know them on a level beyond teaching. They became our friends; people we could confide in and share our problems with, or talk with about any subject in the world. They treated us with respect and were sensitive to our feelings; we were people, not just students.

Thus, Bettie Jurgensen and Marsha Weitz are women we will always respect and admire. Their instruction, both in academic matters and the ways of life they exposed us to, will remain with us always and will give us advantages in everything we do.

Leaders of the Pack

To every family, no matter how large or small, it is necessary to have an authority figure, a "head of the family", someone to maintain order and, hopefully, peace. But what makes a family special is when that figure is also a friend- a person who will know when you want to laugh or cry or talk or listen, or even when you just want another person near. A friend is also one who instills so much trust in you that you feel terrible when you disappoint them; but down inside, you know that their friendship will not diminish because of your mistakes. That is what we find in the faculty of St. George's. They are the "heads" who establish the rules and keep order in the "household", but, in them, we also find some of our truest and most trustworthy friends. As with parents, their ideals and teachings will serve us well in life, but, more importantly, we will know that their friendship is ours forever.

The Younger Generation

The Underclassmen spent their year creating friendships and their own "families", that will influence them for a lifetime. Through all the special projects and activities-sports, field trips to the Capitol, Dragons' Day, Spirit Week, Halloween parades, and Winterim-they came to know each other in ways that are unique to St. George's. During all the long bus rides, Thanksgiving dinners, homework sessions, Christmas musicals, and hours of digging sod, they had time to find out thousands of things about each other and themselves. And while they discovered these things, they also studied hard, learning all they could, and always managing to make the work seem more like play. The memories of this year of close friendships, lots of fun and much learning will not dim for a long time in anyone's mind.

The juniors seemed the model of every family - each had his or her own interests and separate life, but they all shared in creating and supporting the dynamic personality of their own class. Someone was always around to bellow "Juniors! Rule!", to change the '81 to '82 up on Rattlesnake, or to leave evidence of their skill and talent in everything they touched.

In the midst of a continuous rivalry between Van Halen and the B-52's, days seemingly ruled by the basketball court, and whisperings of the many and varied romances that touched them every week, they somehow managed to pull off the often overwhelming task of putting together the rummage sale and organized the Junior Senior Prom. With the help of Kris Puddy, president, Bruce Soli, vice president, and Kate Blair, secretary, the class got these things done and still had time to relieve the intensity of the work load of junior year: "Okay, as soon as Ed reaches for the bottle, everyone feign butaric acid induced dizziness and stumble out for fresh air!" It was during these times that the giant "land lizard" slithered down the halls, Marya made her almost religious visits to the coffee pot, and food and liquid typing eraser flew in the vicinity of Mark and John's locker, while Paige devoured her seemingly endless supply of powdered doughnuts.

"... to where it says 'Boro'."

"What IS the Jacksonian Demorcracy!?"

"The green eyed monster strikes again!"

"Ah, come on. Someone has to come to Young Life with me."

"Kari? Twitterpated?"

"John, what year is that Corvette?"

"Aaay Ritch, what's the sitch!"

"Jenny, We're proclaiming your locker the 8th wonder of the world!"

"Oh, my Gerns!"

"Oh man, I'm so burnt out."

The sophomore class came alive this year, proving itself to be one of the brightest members of the family. Wherever there were sophomores there was laughter and fun, along with a lot of friendships and unity that made them seem a small family themselves. They proved this unity and trust by deciding not to elect specific class officers, but a triumvirate of sorts made up of Heidi Batt, Mattson Davis and Cindy Nicolai. These three, along with the enthusiasm of the class, helped make the annual Christmas Dance at the Davenport Hotel one of the nicest dances all year.

There was hardly a time that there wasn't a table in the courtyard overflowing with sophomores and shouts of "Neanderthal" coming from it, or a pair of roller skates sitting beneath. Their activities seemed to involve all of them, whether it be ridding themselves of golf balls in P.E., studying at the picnic table by the stream while they nourished R2D2, or picking up nicknames from the Upper Schoolers like "T.J.", "Mattstud", and "Lurch".

"Mike, what did we tell you about chewing on pencils?"

"Macho, Macho, Man . . . "

"One more curse from your lips and you shall be condemned till eternity ends!"

The St. George's Upper School gained something very valuable in the addition of the freshman class. They began the year by electing Sandra Lee as class president, Cory Pepper as vice president and Tom Hebert as secretary. and immediately began involving themselves in almost every activity such as cheerleading, ASB, Lettermen's club, debate, sports, drama and the Page. They even had among them the president of the illustrious Eric Phillips fan club and Mr. Beautiful 1980, Chris Hoesel. They shared and shared alike, whether it was cheerleading uniforms, food, the chore of helping Katy pace off the courtyard, or just the smiles and reassurances of friendship. They even followed in the elders' footsteps by postponing and procrastinating the planning of the Sadie Hawkins dance.

"Hey Studlee."

"There's a new guy in the freshman class? Is he cute?"

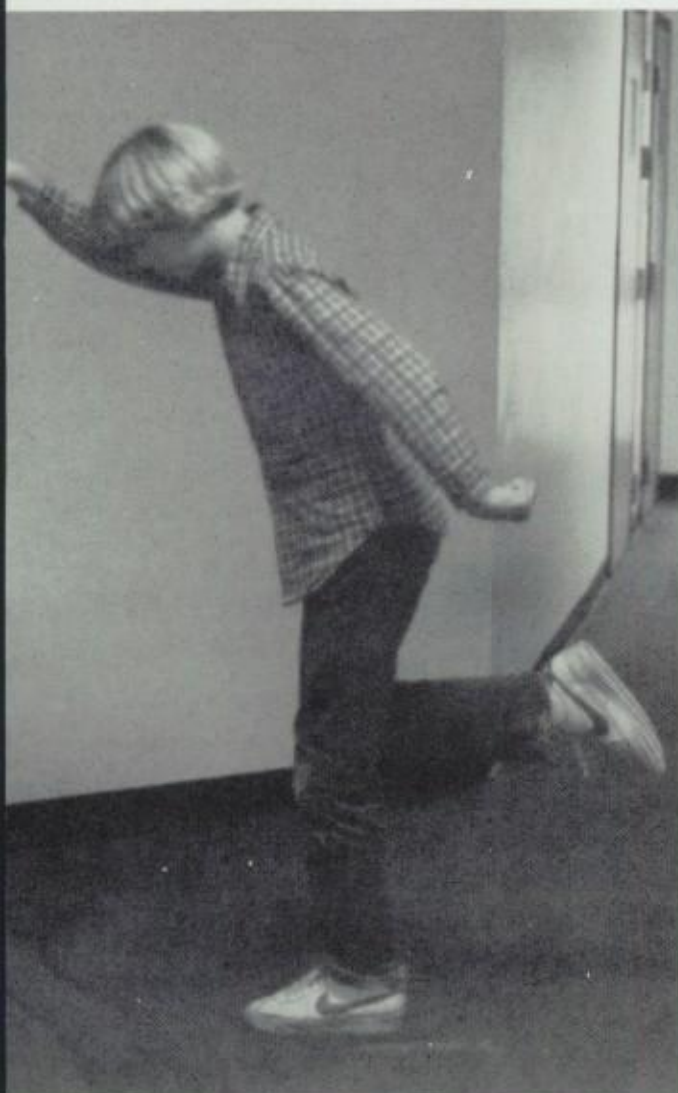

"Did you read what it said about Cory at the 5-Mile Pizza Parlor?"

The Middle School began the year with a new addition to the family "heads", Ross Thomas. Students and teachers alike quickly warmed to him as he initiated a daily running club, assumed basketball coaching duties, and taught an Upper School Winterim class. A former college instructor, he has brought a breath of fresh air to the learning environment. Not content to rest on the laurels of last year, the Middle School has continued to expand its list of weekly "risk offerings". In concert with a number of devoted parents, students explored such new avenues as needlepoint, Jewish and Danish cooking, nature painting, and rabbit raising. Canoe trips, rock climbing, darkroom photography, an afternoon browsing in used bookstores, and French films were other Thursday options. The Halloween Costume Parade proved to be a creative success with top honors going to John Farris and Jan Welk. Other highlights of the year included class barbeque parties following afternoons at the roller rink, a video taped, mock presidential debate in Lura's social studies class and a varied sports program. All of their activities worked to bring their family closer together and to make lasting friendships.

Everyone sometimes wondered how Lower School found time to breathe! We also wondered why everytime one of them was asked how they liked Lower School, we received a bright smile and "I Love It!" Their teachers were always coming up with magnificent ways to teach through the use of special projects, which made school fun, instead of "just school."

"We went to Pioneer Square and I learned . . . " They took a field trip to the Capitol, and saw Dixie Lee Ray herself walk into her office! "Nobody else saw her." And, "we were a little nervous about going by Mt. St. Helen's." They had Show and Tell, played checkers, Yahtzee and football, "only the boys won't let us girls play."

They learned to manage a business, selling M & M cookies, doughnut holes, and apple cider, while at the same time they raised money for trips later in the year and learned how to make change and sell things. "Mike and Dee talk and giggle. Then all of us talk and giggle. Then Mrs. Sabine leans her head against the chalkboard and says 'oh, no!'

All these shared projects and good times in learning brought lower schoolers together to feel like brothers and sisters and made them wish they could always spend their time together. "I like St. George's because we can have a good time together."

"I like it because we have gym everyday."

"We can be nice to each other, like letting people play with you."

"I like this school because people are nice."

"I had a great time."

The Learning House kept themselves very busy this year with many varied activities. At the Fall Show and Tell, the Kindergarten performed songs and dances for a delighted audience of parents and teachers. Thanksgiving provided them the perfect opportunity to express their happiness over friendships along with enjoying a turkey feast. The youngest children of the St. George's family also paraded through all the school during Halloween in their very creative costumes which they then returned to Upper School for a party and much singing.

Throughout the year, they were always busy with something, whether it was a Peter Rabbit production, Suzuki music, the Young Authors Contest and Book fair, or striving to become a Greedy Reader. At Market Place, they sold hot chocolate which had been provided from money borrowed from a real bank. Another outstanding feature to their learning experience was the teaching of French in all levels. Along with this, they adopted a new Parisian classmate, Audrey LeFort, to their Lower School Family.

In spite of all of these special activities and classes, it seemed that the most important thing they did was to keep the rest of us laughing and enjoying their childhood. All of us have special feelings toward the "babies of the family" - feelings of never wanting them to grow up, but at the same time, realizing proudly what they will grow up to be.

The Sporting Life

Sports, sports, sports . . . sometimes we wondered if we would ever get our fill. If it wasn't basketball play-offs or soccer matches, it was tetherball at recess, football in the courtyard, or "basketball" in the senior lounge. A lot of our strength as a family stemmed from our dedication and involvement in sports. Because of the team work and respect for each other that playing sports requires, it was impossible not to grow from the experience. It also demanded that we learn to accept constructive criticism from our friends and teammates, as well as support each other, whether in victory or defeat.

Many victories came our way and all of the teams put forth their best efforts. Tom Jessett made the Boys Panorama B All Opponent Team in basketball, while Syncione Bresgal was appointed to the girls equivalent team. There were countless other stars on all the teams who helped to make the Dragons a team to fear.

This year's soccer team had a fun, competitive season under the direction and discipline of a new family head, Einar Thorarinsson. The Dragons practiced in their own backyard and played their matches against neighboring families at the new Sports Complex, near Joe Albi. The Dragons record this year consisted of 7 fantastic wins and 3 well-fought losses which gave them 4th place in league.

To Einar's occasional distress, the Dragons came up with plenty of jokes to add to the family stories.

"No!! You guys, not me again! You depantsed me YESTERDAY!!

"Oh, Wendall . . . have you heard of the tradition of throwing people in the river on their birthdays?"

"Bill, move the goal posts over there."

Our Cross Country Team this year was, in those famous words of Northwest Christian's, "awesome." Which makes our lone runner, Tom Jessett, the whole team in its entirety. Tom ran with the A and B league schools at District and placed 11th as well as a 3rd place at the Northwest District Meet. At the Colville Invitational Meet, he placed 8th with a time of 17:47 for the 5,000 meter course against Double A, A and B schools as well as some schools from Canada.

The Middle School basketball teams, with great ambition, challenged bigger and stronger teams and have given everyone a lot of hope for their success on the J.V. and Varsity teams next year. The boys finished with a 2-5 record as the strongest team in years. Jeff Lewis led the scoring and has been pegged by Coach Ross Thomas as the "star of the future." The girls finished with an outstanding 4-2 record. One of the highlights of the season was when they clobbered Spokane Lutheran, 46-5. Pam Raab, Mary Karnowsky and Liz Chilton were outstanding.

The Tracksters made a good showing this year, that is, when they showed. Excuses for not running were plentiful, but when they finally made it to the track, they always seemed to pull it together with the help, of course, of Chip Wessberg and Betty Barber.

The girls' Volleyball team had the best season it has had in years. They had an overall 6-4 win-loss record that brought them to the play-offs. A lot of hours of practice from the players and coaching, by Ted Davies went into the season. "I think I hear Betty coming with the keys to the weight lifting room—HIDE!"

The team was all at a personal loss when our fellow friend and team member left to go back east. Who? No other than "Ambs Delicious." Never will we forget the game when Amber played with six fouls while Lisa fouled out with only four. Now, isn't that a league record? The women seemed to be an uncoachable group, leading our own chalk talks and time outs. Poor Betty. Better luck next year trying to get a word in edgewise. We shared at one game the experience of watching one of our teammates, Peggy, being carried out on a stretcher with a slight concussion. The most enjoyable game this year, however, was the slaughter of Inchelium, in which we took them to the cleaners with our hot shots and snazzy moves. We only flew for so long before we were cruelly shot down by Republic. However, we all eased our consciences when considering that they had eighteen players compared to our measely eight. While we were tired and dripping with sweat, they would send a new string trotting onto the court fresh and ready to go. The story of our lives!!!

"Okay . . . where's the team!? Oh, Julie thought the game started at 4:30 and Kathy couldn't find a ride? Right?"

"Bombs away!! One of Syncione's passes is coming this way!"

"Did you say freefrows, Betty?"

"Jen, did you know you look like Elvis with your hair like that?"

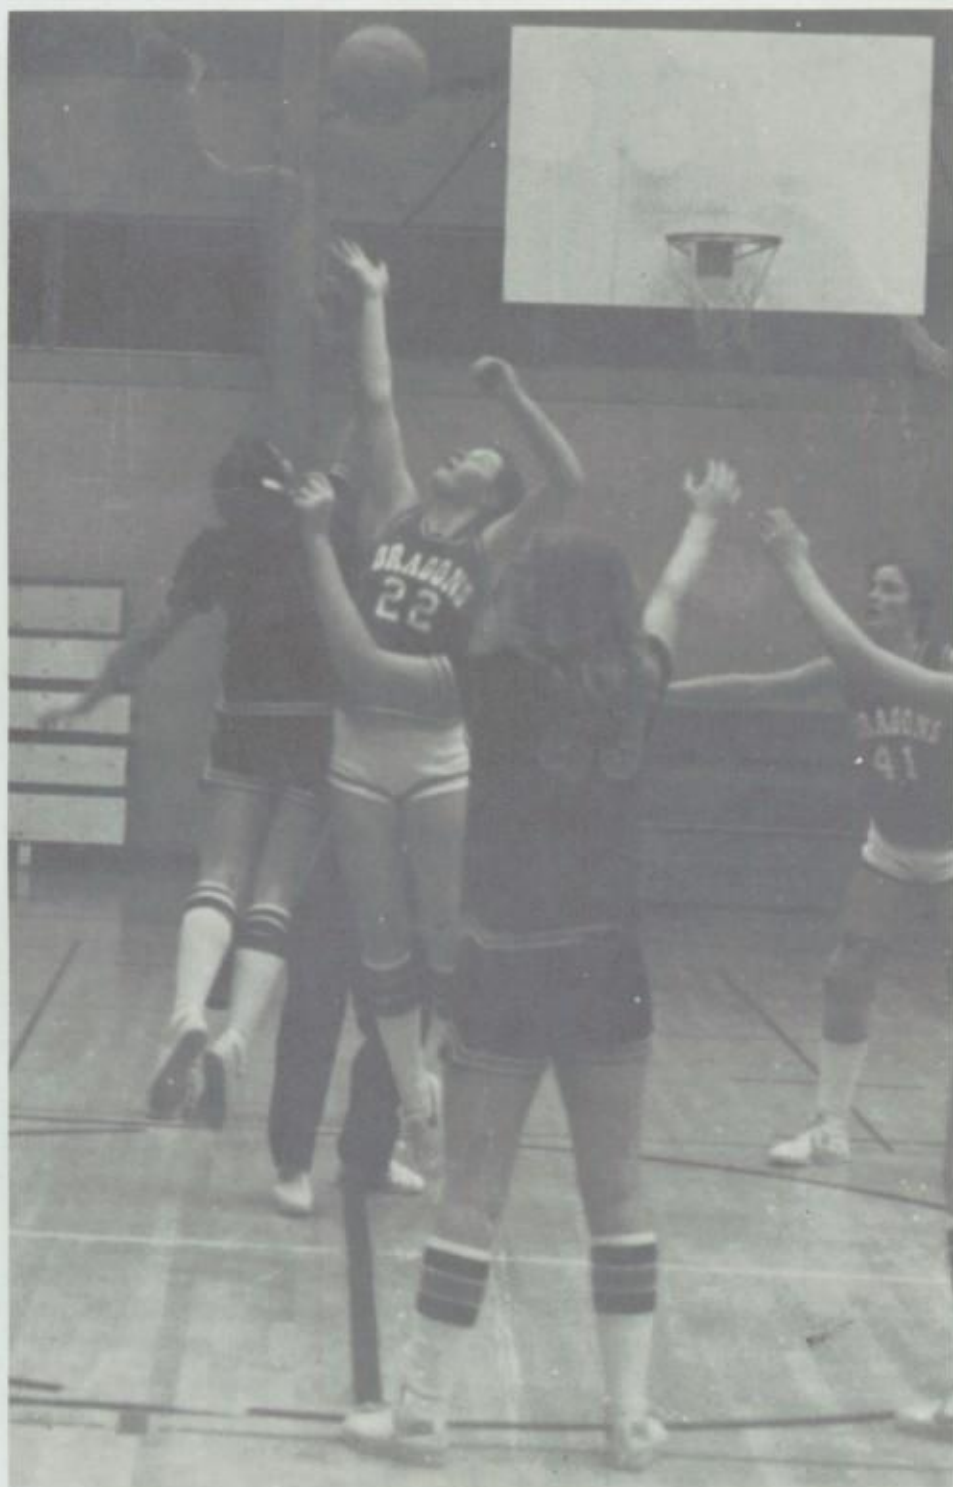

"Liz, I KNOW I had more rebounds than that!!!"

"Lisa's fouls? One . . . I mean two . . . wait . . . I mean four . . . I think."

"You know you guys, I'm just an unsung hero."

Basketball got off to an early start this year with a six week fundamental session prior to the official season. Team members, who were all dressed the same in their cute little white outfits, were encouraged to learn how to handle a basketball before the season began.

The lessons were effective as the girls perfected their league record to a 5-5 win/loss and headed towards the play-offs. They were especially pleased and proud of their season record in considering the fact they had only won a total of five games in the past three years.

This year the girl's basketball team certainly left their mark on St. George's.

This year was the time to strengthen family ties and involvement, since most of last year's J.V. players left the nest and, in moving on, created the opportunity for new people to make their own history. The game record was nothing overwhelming, but in a rebuilding year such as this, strengthening individual talents and working toward teamwork seemed most important. Sandro set a new record for the most points scored in a J.V. game-25. Next year, with the help from their competent coaches in refining their raw talents, the team should come closer to realizing their high potential.

"Chuck, if you throw that ball any higher, it's going to remain in orbit forever!"

"Sandro, the girl's are watching you."

"Did you hear? Galen almost got nominated for the Academy Awards for best leading actor!"

"Lean to left, lean to the right! Stand up, sit down. Fight. Fight. Fight!"

Cheers were heard from the crowd as they yelled in support of the Boys Varsity basketball team. The team this year was full of talented young men who handled the ball phenomonally: Kim with his quickness and double pumps, Jimmy with side court shots and Tom's dead eye from all spots.

Bobby Jones dominated the boards and blocked shots, sending balls down the opponent's throats. Steve DeVleming's tough defense helped the team in the clinch. The list of the talents goes on and on.

They not only played ball well, but they worked as a team to smother the girls on a late night pillow raid on the Seattle adventure. The Seattle bus trip, as well as all the others, brought loud music and fun to the back as well as wandering cheerleaders, desperatly looking for a place to sit, even though there were plenty of empty seats up front. Whether they played ball or goofed off, they were a team. Working together and pulling through when they were down. Their record was almost making the playoffs. The team was great and they deserve a big hand.

Daily Diversions

All work and no play hasn't made the St. George's family a dull one! Why? Because our groups manage to combine the most grueling tests and homework with a large amount of foolishness and fun. Starting early, the Learning House provided Open House and Show and Tell, while the Lower School charged for doughnuts and "invisible sharks." The Middle School exchanged recycled gifts and explored the tides. The Upper School, well, what can you say: Hawaiian Day - hah, three seniors gone insane, square dances, valentines, snow bunnies . . . the list is infinite. Outsiders may see us as ready for Medical Lake, but every member of the family knows that when we laugh and play, as well as work, we learn to laugh together as one.

Fearless Leaders

"Do I have to bribe you guys to come to meetings?"
"Lesson #1- Cookie parties go over a lot better if there are some cookies in attendance, you guys!"
"Jean, you blew it again in the bulletin. Now WHEN is the meeting?"
"What? Sweep the hall? . . . just 'cuz I'm in ASB?"
"Do you think we could make this short?"
"Lisa Halstead . . . Kelly's here!"

ASB was kept busy this year, always trying to think of something to keep the family occupied. They started the year with the annual Big-Little Sister Tea, a talent show, the Halloween Lasagne Lunch and the Learning House Parade. During the winter, they sponsored Dragon's Day, and Upper School Work Day to rebuild the ice skating rink and other repairs; they ATTEMPTED (note the Student Council members) a Christmas Party, they successfully planned and executed the tradition of Winterim, and provided happy Christmases for two needy families in the community. Spring found ASB members dressed as Cupids for Valentine's, having St. Patrick's Day parties, flying kites on the soccer field in March, and staging the traditional legend of St. George's and the Dragon, as well as many others projects.

Perhaps the biggest challenge of the year was getting members to come to meetings. Lisa cornered people in the courtyard, Steph guarded the captured victims, and Jean placed invitations in the morning bulletin.

Below: Lisa Hoesel, Jean Brookbank, Stephanie McAllister-ASB officers,

"Student Council today at lunch. The Freshmen and Sophomores will be there and a guest appearance will be made by Eric Phillips if his schedule permits . . . and it WILL. Love, Jean."

They had a lot of fun, reviving old family traditions and starting new ones. Loyalty to the St. George's family was strong, provoking the annual "St. George's against District 81" argument at Inter High Senate and lots of pride in saying that they represented St. George's.

"Oh boy, Lisa! M.S. is bugging us again this year! When will they get a clue!"
 "Mrs. Barnhard um . . . we um don't have um a car and um we were wondering if you could open um the concession stand . . . please?"
 "Steph, the waxy kind are rude! Take the little car and get the others!!"

Who's gone every other Wednesday, away almost every weekend, talking about cases and topicality in the halls? Guess who? It's the barely known, secret section of the St. George's family called the debaters. A family within a family the debate team spent more time in one year on the crayon colored bus as well as those infamous charters than most students of the family spent in their entire educational life. Always striving for "unity" and "Hardware", the debate team amazingly realized its potential in both areas. "Mother sometimes had to control the antics of her little family, but there were the times when Auntie Beanie laughed with her children, nephews and nieces at life, love and the pursuit of fame. Success, tragedy, hysterics and discovering all in one family? Sounds like a soap. No, it's just the debate team! "It's off to the debate wars . . . wrong. The pinstripe wars! "Nancy and Jackie, your decorum is showing!" "Some coach was yelling out the window in the middle of the night . . . " "It's thousand finger time." "It's raining sugar and water and Twin Evils is the late, late movie. Everybody stay up!" "Loreleeeeeeee . . . . . !!!"

"Um . . . Jennifer? Do you have another photo list? I seem to have lost the other one . . ."

"Listen-rumor has it, Mrs. Hill has a pizza stashed for tonight. Let's stay."

It seems so easy in the beginning. Simply glue picture on funny, gridded piece of paper, identify everyone, throw in some sentiment for good measure, and you have it: a Shield.

Ah, but no. Things never seem to be quite that easy. The pictures that were to be glued onto the layout sheets never seemed to be developed and people were often yanked from class and shoved haphazardly into groups to have their photo hurriedly snapped. One had only to listen for the sound of frantic and yelling voices - Jen and Bruce would be standing there, both clutching pieces of tattered paper-Jen accusing and Bruce trying desperately to defend himself. But the pictures always seemed to get in somehow, and Jen and Bruce usually mended their wounds.

There was the constant struggle of getting enough people together for "official" meetings, coming up with new and exciting titles for sections, and figuring out how many stupid picas a 30 type size title used up.

But amid the late nights, aborted locker raids, tacky titles, too much junk food and too little time, we finally licked it. Not without, however, the invaluable help of Elizabeth Hill and her endless supply of treats.

"Mrs. Hill, you know darn well you're just as catty as I am!!"

"Uh Marya- do you want me to type awhile . . . please?"

The manuscript is our family's finest effort and talent put forward into one literary magazine. It included works of students from all levels and ranged from short stories with illustrations to poetry. Editor this year was Helen Walrath, with Ted Sabine acting as advisor with Pat Codd and Jeannie Stecher providing much appreciated help.

Each month, Papa Farley and his group of "family criers" published a newspaper which kept St. George's in touch with everyone belonging to our small community. It is often an awesome undertaking to try to communicate a wide variety of activities to so many people with different interests, but advisor Bob Farley and editor David Fish, with their staff, managed to pull off quite a respectable job. Controversial editorials ranging from the elections to the infamous lounge kept the Page refreshing, and brain twisters gave us a chance to exercise our native creative talents. A Winterim Page was pulled together with a staff of two - Dave and Amber. All catastrophies and triumphs included, this year's issues of the Page constituted quite a commendable job. Staff, we're happy to have you keeping the St. George's family informed!

Opus 24

Our family proved to be very musically talented this year. Everyone from the six-year olds to the seniors and faculty were involved in the festivities; entertaining us with their voices, violins, piano, and recorders, as well as many other talents. Mr. Farley and Mrs. Rizzutti put on the tradiditonal Christmas Fête, with several recorder groups, ensembles, Orff pieces, and even readers theater. Spokane Symphony watch out, here comes Saint George's!

The Learning House spent their music time taking Suzuki music lessons. In other words, learning to play minature violins, violas, etc. Huge notes on cardboard and little instruments; a harmonic contrast!

Family Night at the Theater

with Uncle Bob and the Kids

This year the St. George's family turned out for many fine evenings of entertainment. Uncle Bob kicked off with "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" in October, which brought its cast, directors, and crew two standing ovations and much praise.

As always, Uncle Bob and the kids just weren't content with your common "school play". They instead chose a musical based on the cartoon, "Peanuts," by Charles Schultz which the young actors perfected with a romantic dance about Linus's (Mike Roy) joyful reunion with his blanket and a quartet of Charlie (David Fish), Schroeder (Brandon Winslow), Lucy (Sandra Lee), and Linus during a class in which all four presented contrasting analyses on Peter Rabbit.

"Peter Rabbit is a stupid book about a stupid rabbit who stole vegetables from other people's gardens." With this musical, the more artistic members of the St. George's family provided an enjoyable "family night out on the town" that was full of laughs, and, needless to say, a lot of fun.

"Who's got the base 4?"

"Eve, pin up you ears."

"David, what are you doing on the floor?!"

"The last time I wore a dress this short was . . . "

"I wonder if Mike dances like that with his girlfriends, too?!"

A Family Tradition

Fast becoming a favorite tradition at St. George's, Winterim once again brought our family closer together and broadened our horizons as well. Teachers, parents, and generous "friends" gave of their time and offered a wide range of classes. These included such diverse subjects as French Cooking in the Davenport House with Bettie Jurgensen, "Walking on Air" with Middle School teacher Ross Thomas, and juggling with professional juggler Richard Greenough.

Classes proved interesting for those not enrolled in them as well. The cooking class peddled French cooking every day at lunch to a thankful group of Beanery victims, and mannequin heads, tennis balls and bowling pins flew around the courtyard, terrorizing innocent bystanders and rewarding a lucky few with detentions.

In the end, all of us benefited from the week; and it helped ease us into the grind of the spring semester. We all look forward to Winterim '82 and flocks of tennis balls . . .

"If they don't come over here first, they're brats."

"What? I thought we were supposed to wear the white skirts!"

"Jenny, you have five seconds to get your uniform finished."

The cheerleaders - led fantastically by Mother Heather - were one of the most enjoyable "siblings" within our large family. They always had a smile, a laugh and an encouraging word for everyone - especially the players. Hours went into their support of the team. Cindy and Heather lived in the Senior Lounge for a week this summer to attend Cheerleading Camp at Whitworth (they got two "excellents" and one "superior"), and Ann and Cindy made up a dance routine. Lots of weekly and weekend practices went into assuring that they would be able to boost spirit successfully.

The family history of feebleness that threatened to haunt them was sufficiently quenched and a new tradition of excellent cheering has begun. This was proved by the "Thanks you guys! You were the best!" an often heard salute from the players.

"Cindy, are you sure you can't find your anklets!"

"Ann . . . two bits again?!"

"If a single line of 'Rock That' ever reaches my ears, I'm busting the recorder. And that goes for the face of the person who calls me the happy cheerleader!"

"Listen Hitler, it's a Sunday afternoon and we've been in this gym for 4 hours. Isn't it good enough yet?"

"Hey Heather, did you bring the doughnuts for practice? I'll stay."

School spirit was high this year, higher than it has been in a long time. Spirit Week was a fantastic success! Each class decorated their own section of the halls, the Seniors winning with their own version of Hamlet's "To be or not to be," and the cheerleaders were slaves for a day to anyone who could make them talk.

(Stephanie was the only one who escaped captivity.) The final day was "red and white day," which involved everyone dressing up in school colors. The whole Upper School got involved and by the end of the week it was obvious that our team would get a lot of support from the family this year.

The pep assemblies this year were indeed superb. The cheerleaders spent many hours planning and preparing for them and were always well rewarded by the reaction they received from the audience. The best parts of the assemblies were the games and class competitions! The Upper School won the "elephant walk" in the all school assembly and the Senior Class, naturally, won the "mummy race" which entailed a girl from each class wrapping a boy from her respective class in toilet paper. At the pep assembly before the Northwest Christian Game, a team of senior-freshmen beat both the junior-sophomore team and the faculty in the tug-o-war competition. (They won even though some juniors accidentally got their legs wrapped around a beam and the teachers, unknowingly, of course, tied themselves to a doorknob.)

"Macho Mentor isn't even enough! They've got to be SUPER STUDS!!"

The Pep Club and Letterman's Club put a lot of energy into promoting family spirit and pride this year. Every Friday of the basketball season, players of all three teams, along with the J.V. and Varsity cheerleaders, received surprises from their Guardian Angels and Super Studs. For some, it was cookies, cakes, and brownies; others found fruit, granola bars and nuts hidden in their lockers, while still others were surprised with plants and, um, "literature."

It was surely a good year for the "spirit crop."

The Male Beauty Contest was one of the highlights of the year and will certainly be very well recorded in the family albums of all who witnessed and participated in it. There was a talent contest in which Eric recited poetry and Mattson tap danced. The foxy males - Eric Phillips, Bruce Soli, Mattson Davis and Chris Hoesel - dazzled us with their bathing suits and in the Grand Finale paraded their slender waists in evening gowns. Chris tossed candy from his "Candy bags" and Mattson swished and sparkled in the spotlights.

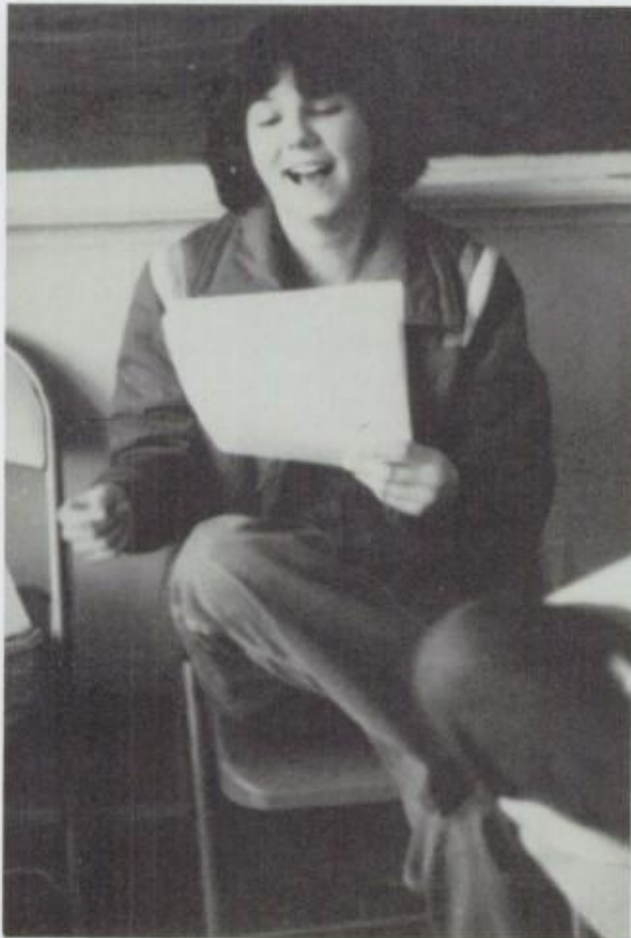

Chris charmed the judges, and won the hearts of the adoring audiences and was crowned "Male Beauty 1980-81" by the retiring Beauty Jimmy Patterson. Chris made his traditional walk down the runway to Bing Crosby's "White Christmas."

The Young-Author's contest of 1981 was held in the Chapel-Library. The Learning House students wrote, illustrated, and bound their books for judging. The four top books were chosen, and they and their authors attended the Young-Authors Conference in Spokane in May. The winners were Ben Pierce, Roanne Selinger, Angela Keller and Jared Ragland. The Children's Corner Bookshop held a book sale at the school in conjunction with the contest. Students made wish lists from the wide selection displayed in the library, then purchased them the next day.

Doing Your Own Thing

High School Bowlers, our brain children, were seen taking cuts in the lunch line and then competing with each other to answer high IQ questions between bites of hotdogs and chili.

Early on in the season, however, they met tough Lewiston, Idaho on KHQ and fell to defeat, despite a hearty try. But with the "whiz kid" underclassmen returning next year, we are looking forward to a good strong, season in the fall.

Some of the most special moments a family experiences is during the time in which it grows in size. The addition of new family members creates new opportunities for us to investigate new ideas and interests, as well as enhancing the family's life together by sharing unique personalities and thoughts.

We have been very rich in that respect this year. Many old "St. Georgians" came home after venturing into other worlds, while lots of new faces worked their way into our community. In the ways of families, the wanderers and newcomers alike quickly became as special and necessary to our lives as if they had always been part of the family.

All of your friends will be going their separate ways. Whole new worlds will be opening up for you, full of fascinating and sobering discoveries. But your paths will cross from time-to-time, bringing back all of the warm memories of St. George's School. As you choose your individual roads to travel, we at the Two Swabbies want to wish you all the happiness and success possible.
